

Little Desert National Park

Visitor Guide

Dalkaiana Wartaty – Welcome. The Traditional Owners of this land; the Wotjobaluk, Wergaia, Jadawadjali, Jaadwa and Jupagalk people welcome you to country. Little Desert National Park is more than a desert. Camp beside the Wimmera River fringed with River Red Gums, or hike the rolling dunes of the desert. Open spaces and peaceful campgrounds make this park a natural treasure.

Co-operative management of the park

In 2005, the Barengi Gadjin Land Council Aboriginal Corporation entered into the first Indigenous Land Use Agreement (ILUA) in Victoria with the Victorian and Australian Governments.

A co-operative agreement that includes this park ensures that the traditional owners will be able to continue to care for country by being involved in the management of the areas where their native title rights have been recognised.

Getting there

The park is 375km west of Melbourne, between the Wimmera River and the South Australian border. A number of sealed roads lead to the park from the Western Hwy and a gravel road leads from Dimboola to the eastern part of the park.

Once you leave the bitumen, most tracks are very sandy and are suitable for experienced drivers of four wheel drive vehicles only (not suitable for all-wheel drive vehicles).

Things to see and do

Walking

Stringybark Walk 1km, 30 minutes circuit

Commencing from the Nhill - Harrow Rd, this peaceful loop walk showcases the diversity of the Little Desert. Explore the variety of plants, including Desert Stringybark, Silver Banksia and Yellow Gums. In spring, don't forget to look underfoot, so you don't miss the wildflowers, such as Mallee Honey-Myrtle and a variety of native orchids.

The loop also offers plenty of opportunities for birdwatching, especially after rain.

A factsheet at the start of the walk will guide you along the walk.

Sanctuary-Keith Hateley Nature Walk 1km, 30 minutes return

Kiata Lowan Sanctuary was the name given to this area prior to the establishment of the Little Desert National Park. Keith Hateley was a local resident and major campaigner for the conservation of the Little Desert for the protection of the Malleefowl.

Start this nature walk in the sanctuary picnic area, 10km south of Kiata. Guided by a factsheet that can be collected at the start of this walk, you will be able to explore the plant and bird life of this area. If you are lucky you may catch a glimpse of the rare Malleefowl.

Pomponderoo Hill Nature Walk 1km, 30 minutes return

This walk is on the park's northern boundary, 4km south of Dimboola. It loops around typical desert vegetation. A lookout gives great views of the park, Wimmera River and the surrounding area.

Campground trailhead walks

Kiata Campground is a trailhead for several walking tracks. Walking track Factsheets are available at the start of these walks.

Horseshoe Bend and Ackle Bend campgrounds have a short walk leading to the river. The walk provides great views of the desert, particularly at sunset. Continue past Ackle Bend and follow the track a further 1km to the river before returning to the campgrounds.

Long distance walking

The Little Desert Discovery Walk offers bushwalkers a unique long-distance walk tackling the 74 km Little Desert Discovery Walk. Options of one to four days' duration are possible.

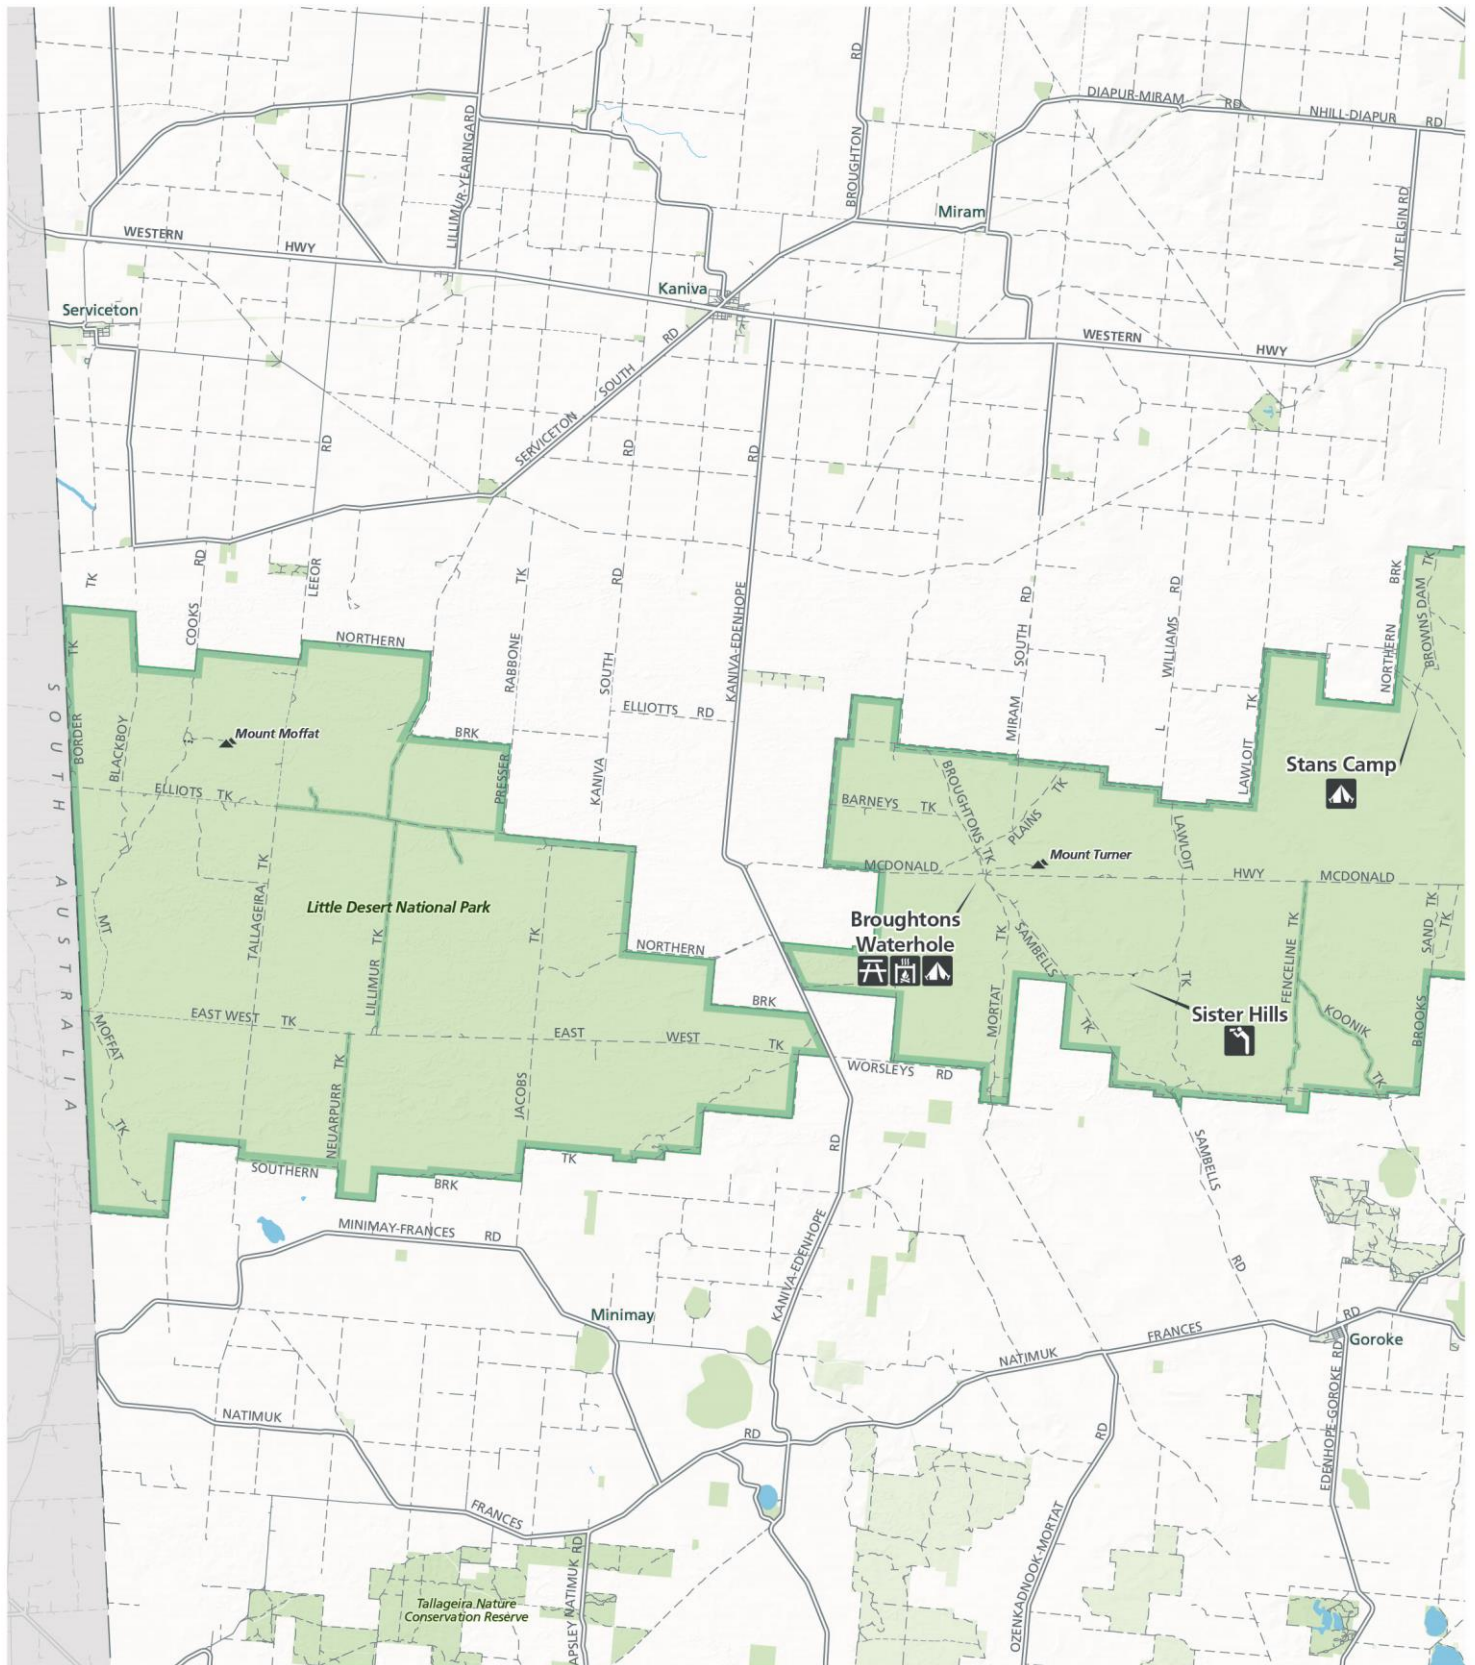

This walk is a great opportunity to explore some of the park's diversity on foot, and is especially colourful in spring. The park has 670 species of native plants and over 220 bird species recorded.

On this walk, you are likely to discover the Little Desert National Park is a place to unwind and to find beauty in the small things. From the myriad of insects such as the Jewel Beetle, one of the deserts pollinators, to the nocturnal inhabitants like the bats and pygmy possums that call the desert home.

You may not be the only one out and about on these tracks though. Keep an eye out for shingle-back lizards, skinks and brown snakes basking in the warmth. Perhaps you can see evidence of their tracks left behind in the sand as they cross over the path. And don't forget to look up in the sky for Wedge-tailed eagles soaring high overhead.

Overnight walkers are asked to register their details a week in advance by completing and emailing a Trip Intention Form – see additional resources. There are two overnight camps along the way, accessible only by walkers. Most of the walk is on sandy, slightly undulating tracks, however these tracks can become challenging in summer.
