This walking tour is an introduction to the Art Deco heritage still found in and around Mildura. Many significant buildings in Mildura and the outlying areas exhibit features that were either built during the Art Deco period or were influenced by the style.

Following the establishment of the irrigation colony in 1887, the first buildings in Mildura were in the Victorian and later Federation style: employing local red brick, corrugated iron roofs and wide verandahs.

Between the First and Second World Wars, three architectural styles emerged in Australia: Californian Bungalow, Spanish Mission and Art Deco. Art Deco influences in both housing and commercial buildings can be found in Mildura up until the 1950’s.

Take to the streets, explore our hidden gems and discover the regions Art Deco past. We hope you enjoy the walk.

ART DECO

First introduced to the world from the 1925 Exposition International des Arts Decoratifs et Industries Moderne held in Paris, the term wasn’t popularised until the 1960’s. Characterised by linear decorative designs, reminiscent of modernising technology, it emphasised long, thin forms, curved surfaces and geometric patterns, symbolic of the expansion of the machine age.

A modernisation of many different artistic styles and themes from the past, it borrowed from Far and Middle Eastern designs, Greek and Roman themes, Egyptian and even Mayan influence. It emphasised abstraction, distortion and the simplification of geometric shapes and intense colours.

To assist you to recognise Art Deco buildings, typical architectural features may include:

- Dominant vertical lines and horizontal lines.
- Simplicity: relatively stripped-down in terms of the facade and its features.
- Upper levels of buildings set back in stages from the vertical.
- Different use of materials: combinations of stone, brick and metal.
- Geometric ornamentation: use of circles, diamonds, chevrons, zig-zags, triangles, pyramids, spirals, octagons and stylised floral motifs.
- Frequently used symbols/motifs: sunbursts, plant and animal life, gears, lightning bolts, relief sculpture embodying justice, truth, knowledge, industry, labor, man’s strength, work ethic, achievement, commerce and bounty.
- Decorative methods: relief sculptures (in limestone, terracotta, metal: iron and bronze), painted murals, tile mosaics, decorative metalwork (grills, various covers, railings, door frames) and flat against the wall fluted columns.
